Moon Hoax morons soon to be foiled by LRO images of US and SOVIET missions

- From: J Waggoner <jwaggon@xxxxxxxxxx>

When the Lunar Reconnaissance orbiter takes off for lunar orbit this fall, some landing site images will be available if not all of all probes and landing sites of Apollo spacecraft and Soviet expeditions. This could well include the fabled SIV stages and their smashed remnants. Either way Tranquility base, to Hadley Rille will be on display and the Lunokod and surveyor missions too! We all know that the naysaying Moon Hoaxers will say its all faked but for the open minded, the more evidence the merrier....

On the LRO camera-sweep agenda are trips down memory lane too, said Mark Robinson of Northwestern University's Center for Planetary Sciences in Evanston, Illinois. He is Principal Investigator for the Lunar Reconnaissance Orbiter Camera (LROC).

Take note. For you "Apollo landings were a hoax" believers LROC's sightseeing abilities should set the record straight.

LROC is to image U.S. and Soviet landing sites on the Moon. That includes NASA's Ranger and Surveyor lunar probes, as well as the touch down spots of Apollo expeditionary crews and the impact sites of spent Saturn rocket stages that hurled astronauts moonward. Also on the LROC see list are the Soviet Union's Lunakhod automated rovers, Robinson told SPACE.com.

"We will image the Apollo sites and you will see the descent stages sitting on the surface," Robinson said. LROC will clearly see the overall shape of that landing hardware, but won't be able to resolve such things as the insignia on the side of the descent stage, or see the stripes on astronaut-planted flags, he said.

Additionally, Robinson noted, given a setting Sun in the lunar sky, LROC should spot the long shadow of descent stages cast across the Moon's crater-pocked terrain.
